The royal consort, a gigantic islander, appeared barefooted, like all the rest of the courtiers, and began to touch my hands, my bow, my fiddle, so that I could scarce continue to play. I was at length so squeezed by the crowd, that I began to have serious apprehensions for the safety of my instrument; but Pomare soon dismissed her court, and remained alone with me. She wished to examine my violin, touched the strings, and then returned the instrument. I now played a Tabitian melody, which seemed to please her much. She askel whether I came from France; and when I told her I was not a Frenchman, she shook my hand, and whispered: "I do not like those fellows." course she has reason enough not to like them, since they have deprived her of her power, and reduced her to mere nominal royalty. She now untied a small gold cross from her necklace of corals, and handed it to me, with the words: " Take Papitee. I shall never forget my visit to Tahiti. To-morrow, I sail for Australia.

The 4th of July.

This anniversary was kept with more than usual spirit yesterday, and the holiday was very general. In the morning at 11 o'clock there was a fuil meeting of American citizens at the new Club Room. The proceedings were opened by the President, Dr. R. W. Wood, who was followed by the Rev. S. C. Damon. The Declaration of Independence was read by B. W. Field, Esq., after which the company repaired to a really beautiful collation. The usual 13 toasts were given, besides supplementary ones. After the reading of the Declaration a salute of 31 guns was fired. Every thing passed off with the greatest satisfaction, and Of good feeling was manifested everywhere.

In the evening a brilliant ball was given in the New Court House, which was literally crowded. To this the residents of all nations were invited, and a more splendid affair never happened in Honolulu. Their Majesties were amongst the guests, H. R. H.
